A polypeptide comprising at least an immunogenic portion of a prostate tumor protein defined as SEQ ID 108 and which is encoded by the related SEQ IDs 2,3,107 (according to the Description of the Sequence Identifiers), fragments and variants thereof, fusion proteins comprising it, polynucleotides or oligonucleotides derived therefrom, antibodies or fragments thereof binding to the polypeptide, pharmaceutical compositions or vaccines comprising these products and their use in methods for inhibiting, monitoring or diagnosing the development of a prostate cancer, for removing tumor cells from a sample or for expanding and/or stimulating T-cells.

Inventions 2-450: Claims 1-64 (all partially and as far as applicable)

As for subject 1 but concerning respectively SEQ IDs 1,4-106,109-111,115-171,173-175,177,179-305,307-315,326,328,330,332-335,340-375,381,382,384-476,524,526,530,531,533,535 and 536.

The use of polypeptides derived from prostate cancer cells for the development of therapeutic and diagnostic means has been well documented in the prior art :

[1] - W09733909, W09837093 and W0 9837418 disclose polypeptides for treating and diagnosing prostate cancer. These polypeptides (or the corresponding nucleic acid sequences) are used for the preparation of vaccines and other pharmaceutical compositions, antibodies, probes or primers

[2] - In IMMUNOTECHNOLOGY 3 (1997),161-172, Sjögren, H. reviews the various techniques used for cancer-vaccination by using engineered cells. In figures 1 and 2, the author summarises the key factors involved in the interactions between T-cells and antigen-presenting cells, in particular dendritic cells. The success of these therapy is exemplified, among others, with prostate cancer in rats (see pages 167 and 168).

In view of the prior art, the problem underlying the application can be defined as the provision of further polypeptides derived from prostate cancer.

The solutions proposed in the underlying application can be summarised as the polypeptides (and the corresponding nucleic acids) as defined in claims 1 and 31.

Due to the fact that the use of polypeptides derived from prostate cancer cells for the development of therapeutic and diagnostic means is known in the prior art, that therapeutic immunization techniques against cancers, and especially prostate cancer are common state of the art, due to the essential difference in primary structure of the different groups of solutions, and due to the fact that no other technical features can be distinguished which, in the light of the prior art could be regarded as special technical features, the ISA is of the opinion that there is no single inventive concept underlying the plurality of claimed inventions of the present application in the sense of rule 13.1 PCT. Consequently there is lack of unity.

The applicant states and shows that some sequences as defined in claims 1 and 31 correspond to the same product (e.g. clone F1-12 corresponds to SEQ IDs 2,3, 107 and 108) and therefore to the same inventive concept. Nevertheless, due to the lack of an obvious and straight forward relationship between the product designations and the corresponding sequences in the Sequence Listing, the ISA had to consider (with exception of Subject 1.) each sequence as a different invention formulated as the 450 different subjects on the communication pursuant to Art. 17(3)(a) PCT.

In case the applicant choses to pay one or more additional search fees for any of subjects 2 to 450, and provides a clear relationship between a product designation and several of the sequences, the ISA is willing to regroup these sequences in one search effort.

Continuation of Box 3.

Although claims 23 24 31-33 36 37 39-41 are (partially) directed to a method of treatment of the human/animal body, the search has been carried out and based on the alleged effects of the compound/composition.

1. The present communication is an Annex to the invitation to pay additional fees (Form PCT/ISA/206). It shows the results of the international search established on the parts of the international application which relate to the invention first mentioned in claims Nos.:
1-11, 14-64
2. This communication is not the international search report which will be established according to Article 18 and Rule 43.
3. If the applicant does not pay any additional search fees, the information appearing in this communication will be considered as the result of the international search and will be included as such in the international search report.
4. If the applicant pays additional fees, the international search report will contain both the information appearing in this communication and the results of the international search on other parts of the international application for which such fees will have been paid.
